Synopsis:

Father's stroke sets off a tale of three days and two nights in the life of one family. Because of it both sons and their partners turn up at their parents' place at a secluded place in the countryside. After a long time they are all together in one place. Time almost comes to a standstill, the reverential mood invites meditations about the fundamental questions of life. Inconspicuous, strange coincidences point their paths in unpredictable directions. A restrained movie which relies on the audience's active participation brings back to Czech cinematography a spiritual dimension.

Directors note:

Film is my last experiment. I don't know, what this film is about. It's about everything, what it will provoke in a viewers head. I wanted to use principles of painting and music in the movie.

Producers note:

With Vít Zapletal and his generation of FAMU graduates fresh and international attitudes are coming to Czech cinematography. I strongly believe that Zapletal will succeed in Europe and I would like to help him with that. He combines strong message with very original style. His film can help much older and experienced people to understand basic human problems.
